Best Practices for Better Profits in Honduras

Submitted by jcupp on May 29, 2014

More than 80 percent of the people of Tomala, Lempira, Honduras, live in poverty, making this municipality one of the poorest in the region. Feed the Future provides assistance to these families, including this farmer. With just the implementation of basic best agricultural practices, this farmer has been able to triple his yield and gain the confidence to begin planting more profitable vegetable crops. Photo by Hector Santos, USAID
